PUT DOWN THE BRAKES.

No matter how well the track is laid,
No matter how strong the engine is made,
When you find it running on the downward grade,
Put down the brakes!

If the demon of drink has entered the soul,
And his power is getting beyond your control,
And dragging you on to a terrific goal,
Put down the brakes,
Remember the adage, "Don't trifle with fire."

Put down the brakes!
Temptation you know is always a liar;
If you want to crush out the burning desirer,
Put down the brakes!

Are you running in debt by living too fast?
Do you ock back with shame on a profitless past,
And feel that your ruin is coming at last?
Put down the brakes!

Whether for knowledge, or for honor and grace,
You are fast wearing out your body and brain,
Till nature can no longer bear the strain,
Put down the brakes!

The human is weak, since Adam's fall,
Beware how you yield to appetite's call,
"Be temperate in all things," was practiced by Paul.
Put down the brakes!

Ah, a terrible thing is human life!
Its track with many a danger is rife!
Do you seek for the victor's crown in the strife?
Put down the brakes!

I stood upon the ocean's briny shore,
And with a fragile rod I wrote
Upon the waves "Agnes, I love thee!"
The mad wave rolled by and blotted out
The fair impression Fruitless! Cruel wave! Treacherous
I'll trust no more!

But with giant hand I'll pluck
From Norway's frozen shore,
Her tallest pine and dip its top
Into the crater of Vesuvius,
And upon the high and burnished heavens,
I'll write—
"Agnes, I love thee!"
And I would like to see my Dog-wag end wash that out.
For the Republican.]

AMATA.

FROM THE GERMAN OF HANS THIRAR.
BY A YOUNG LADY OF JACKSONVILLE.

CHAPTER II.

Very much embarrassed was she the young wife, and very monosyllabic, and apparently, totally conscious of the homage brought to her from all sides.
"She is like a beautiful painting and just as silent," said a Prussian student to his companion, who, after many attempts to elicit a conversation with Amata, was obliged to withdraw completely defeated.

"I have tried every subject with her —theatres, concerts, balls—but she has not been to any yet, and she did not even bite at the bait of the theatre."

Just at this moment Frau Wedel, choosing the time when Amata believed herself freed from the gaze of strangers, bent her hawk's nose over the young wife.

"Good evening and welcome here, among us, my dear Frau Gregorius!"
said the lady in a heart-felt tone, pressing Amata's hand warmly. "I have only lately had the pleasure of meeting you at our dear Weinman's house, and will regard each other as old acquaintances, shall we not? I love to get acquainted in a short time, especially with young people."

"I feel myself particularly drawn towards young married people"—continued she, "they appear warmer than other people, and I feel as if I could confide in them more than in any other class."
For there are sorrows even in the happiest marriage—that I know, for mine with the dear sainted Wedel belonged to the very happiest.

"But," she continued with her candour handkerchief at her eyes. Amata regarded her with sympathy, for the tall lady always wore black and ever looked sad—she had been a happy wife and mother, but her husband long since died, and at this moment Amata could almost envy the true widow, who had once possessed a great happiness, no matter whether it rested in earthly love or not.
At last she came over her grief, and which escaped not the observing Professor. Again she heartily pressed Amata's hand, then Counselor Bern interrupted her.

"Fardon me, honored ladies, if I appear as peace-disturber to break up your certainly interesting conversation—but hunger is impetuous and should, according to Frederick Schiller, next to love, form the highest motive of human action, besides my wife would never forgive me if her roast venison grew cold, in a word, I beg the honor of concluding you to table, my highly esteemed Frau Gregorius. Counselor Weinmann begs the same honor of you, Frau Wedel," and the lively Counselor went to the richly covered table joking and chatting with Amata and followed by the other guests.

"Allow me, my dear Frau Gregorius, to introduce to you your right-hand neighbor," said Counselor Bern turning to Amata, as he led her to the place of honor on his right. "Herr Dr. Lendiger of the High School in this place, my dear friend and countryman, enthusiastic admirer of the fair sex, and long since possessed with an ardent desire of offering you his homage!"

Amata raised her violet eyes half smilingly and half inquiringly to the gentle man. The presence of the merry benevolent Counselor had, the few times she had previously met him, exercised on her an enervating influence; she felt herself more unconstrained in the pure refreshing atmosphere, which ever seemed to surround him.

And truly charming did she now appear with the half requizzed smile with which she observed the awkward bow of Dr. Lendiger. The tall narrow chested young man had to all appearances, been too good for nothing since Mother Nature with limbs. His arms and hands as well as his legs and broad feet dangled around and under him so forlornly and uselessly that it seemed he was quite anxious to give to every one of his abundance.

Amata silently rejoiced for him when he at last seated himself by her side with all his limbs, and did not find courage on account of his great awkwardness, to move to tell him he had placed his chair on her little white smock dress and was doing it serious harm.

"I must add that Dr. Lendiger is a botanist," remarked Counselor Bern turning quickly from his neighbor on the left to Amata, before Dr. Lendiger had quite finished a dull remark on the great heat of the dining room. "I tell you this because you are a naturalist, and I have observed it—why he picked up the azalea which fell from your bouquet, Frau Professorin. One must never be unfamiliar with the names of the plants, and as this very moment he has cut a flower in his left hand pocket already classified and catalogued!" continued the incomparable Counselor, quite regardless of the bustling glances of his friends, as he was now conversing with the young lady, and the latter, for the latter that the talkative of the lady on the Counsel-or's left, as well as his general duties as host, thoroughly occupied his attention he could only nod and then contribute to the entertainment of the one on his right, so Dr. Lendiger had a tolerably free field and he made good use of it.

"If one had examined the botanist on which the choice of that evening as to what he had eaten of vegetable and animal food—from all sweet things his great antipathy held him aloof by a certain instinct—he would have sworn as willingly as he could to the fact that he had eaten of the capon with oyster sauce, the pride of the Counselor Bern. The ice once broken he conversed with Amata, like King Solomon, on all subjects, from the history of the world to the history of Lebanon, and though dull and awkward in his manner of speech as in his movements, yet his conversation was original and interesting, and Amata, on her side, became more talkative than she had been the whole evening. His shyness worked on hers a homoeopathic cure—like cures like—and when they came to talk of music, and of the great organ of the house of Amata knew nothing, but of the master works of Beethoven, Haydn, Mozart, and Schumann, as they are found in every true German household, and of which Dr. Lendiger, who carried a remarkable knowledge of the subject, was a thorough admirer. Amata's eyes beamed with pleasure.

Frau Weinmann, who sat on the opposite side of the table next to Eberhard, said half contemptuously to him, "You little wife appears to have quite overcome her shyness—everything goes well if one lets young people alone; they will find their own way to each other, and what is the use of having your dear Gregorius, read aloud to me the last professors of your excellent work; you know how much pleasure it gives me to hear from you, and how much I am interested in what you say. I have always corresponded with you."

Professor Gregorius bowed slightly with "you are very kind, Frau Weinmann," but his eyes rested with pleasure on the bright color and the animated expression, and now she smiled to him across the table—yes, he was very pleased of her.

The young gentlemen at the other end of the table could not understand the distribution of places to day, and the Counselor's champagne failed of its usual enlivening effect.

"This is all Bern's doing," remarked an offended Freshman, "it is unkind of him! Instead of us he placed the fair-haired effluvia of the Prussian next to the prettiest face in the whole room, and he has so completely monopolized the conversation that we are left out!"

"Yes," said the Prussian still mortified by his defeat, "it is most astonishing;
the 'Philistine' has undressed the Sphinx's tongue, and he carries on a conversation with him. 'What can she have to say to him with his ugly face?'
Will he never cease blushing?"

"Well that does not signify much with Lendiger's chair, a hand the young wife, for he blushes if he sees a lady
coming in the distance, on the opposite side of the street. Besides he seems to have a particular fancy for flesh-color,
or he would not have his long red neck
so conspicuous."

"Bah!" exclaimed the Prussian, "is he a man who does not look his beautiful neighbor in the face though he wears a red neck? To assist his near-sighted eyes?"

"And yet Dr. Lendiger is a man, and a very fine fellow too," said a student who had heard this conversation in silence, and who now stood in the background, and he laughingly added,
"Knows there is no feminine lying in the neighborhood, he is quite different from the student here in company then, who always lies from his lips, and his face becomes almost handsome from the lively expression of his feelings."

"Then he ought never to leave the ladies' chair, a hand the young
wife, for he blushes if he sees a lady
coming in the distance, on the opposite side of the street. Besides he seems to have a particular fancy for flesh-color,
or he would not have his long red neck
so conspicuous."

written for a man who had assured him he should have a pass over the board which the man said he was about to run under the Mediterranean from Africa to Italy, as soon as it was built. The conductor concluded he had caught the greatest pass kleptomaniac the world ever saw. But when he got back to Harrisburg the affair was examined, and our disciple of the mill went on another excursion.

Thirteen years ago a young and beautiful lady of this village, Elizabeth K. Yover, a niece of Dr. Daniel Knowler, with whom she resided, married Josquin Agrmonon who took his bride home, & since that time they have lived in happiness and allmonee on their plantation at Puerto Principe, the marriage being blessed with three children. Upon the breaking out of the Cuban revolution, Josquin Agrmonon who was a near relative, and we believe an own brother of the celebrated Cuban General Argumano, espoused the cause of the Cuban patriots. The fact that General was enough to seal its fate. His mansion was visited by the Spanish authorities, Joaquin Gramonte dragged out and shot, his mansion burned to the ground and the entire estate confiscated. Two of the children died, and the seed of horror so shocked Mrs. Gramonte that it has affected her mind. She is now with her uncle, under whose kind treatment it is hoped and believed that her mind will be fully restored.—Scholarship Republican, January 14.

to furnish to disabled soldiers artificial limbs free of cost. It is not too much to say that the passage of the law is largely due to the untiring efforts of Capt. A. L. O'Brien who was a gallant soldier of the confederacy in the late war, and justified his devotion to the cause in many hard fought battles, and in the loss of a leg forced him from the field.—Mont. Ad.

The Times declares that, if the American claims are as reported, England must notify the Geneva Arbitrators and the American Government that the arbitration may well cease.

The Daily Telegraph says negotiations to that end have been opened, but British representations are not received in a friendly manner.

Chicago, February 3.—Reports are now being received from the Northwest which show that the change in the temperature, on Saturday night and Sunday, was much

There has been great suffering here and some loss of life on the plains. A special from Sioux City to the Times, says several deaths occurred near that city from exposure. Two men, father and son named Erick and Michael, Journeymen, were frozen to death on Perry Creek, about ten miles north of there. When found they were in the twenty rods of the house and they had come some seven miles for a load of wood, and were overtaken suddenly by the storm, became bewildered, and could not reach a shelter.

A special dispatch to the Journal from Vermillion, Dakota, says several deaths occurred in Vermillion Valley. Of two, 1975, Bear Eod one was frozen to death, and the other had both legs badly frozen, and will be obliged to have all the limbs amputated if he lives. Two men are reported dead on Turkey Creek in Dakota, about fifteen miles from here. Several other deaths are reported, but no particulars are reported. This storm was of heavy rain.

Importance, Gone to His Death.
I was a life insurance agent—one of the modern style. With brassy cheek and fluent tongue and aggravating smile—that persecuted Abner Brown, and he inflamed his bile.

This agent followed Abner like a sleuth-hound on the scent, and managed to encounter him wherever Abner went; and till Abner fell into a state of chronic discontent.

He used to corner Abner, and hang right on and bore, until, in desperation, the disgusted Abner swore;

then the calmly-smiling agent would Abner bore some more.

At last, in desperation, the disgusted Abner swore;

then the calmly-smiling agent would Abner bore some more.

At last, in desperation, the disgusted Abner swore;

At last, in desperation, the disgusted Abner swore;

C. Brock the 7th day of September 1843, lived for 18 or 20 years since his marriage at his residence where he died. Brother Bowles made a profession of religion some 16 or 18 years ago, attached himself to the Baptist church at Cane Creek, in the Summer of 1861. As a Christian he was true to his post, ever filling his seat in church, uniform in the support of the same. As a neighbor he was kind and accommodating. Brother Bowles suffered more or less with illness for the last 16 months; but more for the last 2 weeks of his life, during which time he was confined—Was attacked in last illness with pneumonia, soon terminating his life. He bore his sickness with Christian resignation. Just before dying he expressed to a companion his readiness to die. In his death the church has lost a useful member, the community a good and worthy citizen, the companion an affectionate husband, the children an indulgent and devoted father. But their and our loss is his eternal gain. He was interred in Burying Ground at Mt. Zion Baptist Church, where the funeral was preached from the words: "Be ye also ready, that ye may glorify God, in death," and attended by many relatives, friends and neighbors. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

The Philosophy of Tonic Stimulants.
Some substances have the power of influencing the changes which go forward in the human tissues, without themselves taking any integral part in those changes. Salt, for instance, hastens transformation and waste, and consequently creates the necessity for a more liberal diet; while, on the other hand, alcohol retards change and waste. On this principle, Dr. Fisch, in his Bitters, has furnished a preparation having among other properties that of preserving both the materials and the forces of the system, and in this, as in other things, "A penny saved is a penny gained." But it is not only in this negative way that Dr. Fisch's remedy works for the building up of the physical man. While it holds back the wasting processes it spurs forward the preparing processes. It promotes the flow of the alimentary juices in the stomach, and the stomach and the liver; and thus enables the system to utilize more food—to make more blood. The scriptural assertion that "The blood thereof is the life thereof," is the expression of a physiological fact; and the amount of food which a man can eat with relief, and digest, affords the exact measure and index of the man's strength. And when once Dr. Fisch's remedy has given the start to an improvement in this direction, the unaided energies of nature take up the work and carry it forward; and thus render the amelioration permanent.

A Chapter of Facts.

Space is valuable in a newspaper, and it is therefore proposed in this advertisement to condense a variety of facts, important to the public into a small compass. Those facts refer to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—what that celebrated medicine is, and what it will do. In the first place, then, the article is a stimulant, tonic and alterative, a reliable of a combination of an absolute tonic and a powerful cathartic, and the most efficient medicinal vegetable substances that delinquent research has placed at the disposal of physicians and the public. Those who are afflicted with indigestion, or with such proportions as to produce a preparation which invigorates without exciting the general system, and tones, regulates and controls the minor digestive organs. What this great restorative will do must be gathered from what it has done. The cure of dyspepsia, or any other form of indigestion, in which it has been persistently administered without effecting a radical cure is yet to be heard from, and the same may be said of bilious disorders, intermittent fever, nervous affections, general debility, constipation, rich headache, mental disabilities to which the feeble are so subject. It purifies all the fluids of the body, including the blood, and the gentle stimulus which it imparts to the nervous system is not succeeded by the slightest reaction. This is a chapter of facts which readers, for their own sakes, should mark and remember.

A Living Furnace.

The living body is a regulated furnace. The human organism is all more or less combustible, but not equally so. The blood, that is to say the food in its transformed state, may be compared to the fuel, and the more stable tissues formed from the blood, to the iron stove which contains the fuel. Just in proportion to the energy and celerity with which life is carried on, does this combustion proceed; is fresh fuel, that is to say fresh blood, required. But in order to obtain a supply of fresh blood, food must be prevented from passing on, and must be converted into the food into blood, that is, digestive energy. Where there is a failure in this digestive energy, or in the appetite which it stimulates, the stimulants of various descriptions are frequently had recourse to; but their effect is transient, and if leaned upon too long and too exclusively, they tend to destroy the digestive function and to take away the natural desire for food, which is the only true life supporter. But let Dr. Fisch's Bitters be used perseveringly and in the prescribed quantities, in conjunction with the daily meals, and their tonic qualities will rapidly strengthen the digestive organs and create at the same time a sufficient and healthy appetite. And when an abundance of wholesome food, (which we are thus enabled to take), is duly digested and assimilated, it will give a fullness of vitality which will take away any desire for the improper use of alcoholic stimulants.

Woman's Rights.—One who has long studied this absorbing subject now presents to the women of our country the result of his investigations. He is happy to say that he has at last discovered "Woman's Best Friend." It is adapted, especially to those cases where the womb is disordered, and will cure any irregularity of the "menses." Dr. J. Bradford's Female Regulator acts like a charm in "whites," or in a sudden check of the "monthly course," from cold of the "womb," or like causes, by restoring the discharge in every instance. So also in chronic cases its action is prompt and decisive, and saves the comfort of those who may favor us with a visit. Rooms large and comfortable—fare good as the country affords—servants polite and attentive—charges reasonable. Can accommodate a dozen or two regular boarders.

THE OLD HONESTY.

Ah! there it is, that dear old place,

Undimmed through all these years;

How like some sweet familiar face

My childhood's home appears!

The grand old trees beside the door

Still spread their branches wide;

The river wanders as of yore,

With sweetly murmuring tide;

The distant hills look green and gay,

The flowers are blooming wild;

And everything looks glad to-day,

As when I was a child.

Regardless how the years have flown,

I stand, I stand, I stand,

I catch no fond, endearing tone,

I hear no friendly hum;

I think my mother's smile to meet

I list my father's call,

I pause to hear my brother's feet

Come bounding through the hall;

But silence all around me waits,

A chill creeps over my heart—

No trace of the old love remains,

And tears unbidden start.

What though the sunbeams fall as fair,

What though the budding flowers

Sell their fragrance on the air,

Within life's golden hours

The loving ones that clustered there

God's wills may not restore;

Voices that filled my youthful ear

Will greet my ear no more;

And yet I quit the dear old place

With slow and lingering tread,

As when we kiss a day-old face,

And leave it with the dead.

For the Republican.

AMATA.

FROM THE GERMAN OF HANS THARAG.

BY A YOUNG LADY OF JACKSONVILLE.

CHAPTER III.

That she had married Elmhurst without that childhood love which should form the ground-work of every marriage,

Amata was well aware; she had indeed confessed as much to him when he moved her, but he had until now possessed her entire confidence.

She would have willingly taken oath

on every word that fell from his lips.

She had until now believed in him as a child does in the infidelity of his father or a believer in the fulfillment of God's promises; and now she heard that she must expect him to be different, like other men.

And if he were different, then did he not prove himself magnanimous and willing to make sacrifices than most generally?

It never occurred to her before how wearisome it must be for him daily to go walking with her when he could employ his time so much more usefully and so differently; what a self-sacrifice he was to her playing every evening when he had no musical taste himself!

Why did he not tell her so openly?

Why did he make her this and certainly many other things, day after day,

with time and the help of her friend discover them all—why leave her in the belief that she gave him pleasure when the very opposite must have been true?

And the longer Amata thought of it,

the more she felt that the well-meaning motives of his actions, she only remembered that he had deceived her.

But Frau Professorin Wedel had let-us be just—stirred up this mischief with no positive bad intention. Day after day one had told her she had gone out to see contentment between man and wife

she would have swung her hands over the dreadful calamity.

This woman was, so to say, ruled by one single impulse, to make confidence,

no matter at what

To the People of Alabama.

No man can estimate the importance of an issue of 1872 to the people of the Southern States. Their political destiny for good or evil, depends on the result of the approaching Presidential election. If the Democratic party succeeds, they will have peace and quiet, if the Radical, degradation and ruin. In such a crisis it is of the very first importance that Democratic newspapers shall be well sustained and as widely circulated as circumstances will permit. With a view, therefore, to contributing their share to the noble and glorious cause, the proprietors of the SEMI-WEEKLY ALABAMA will furnish their Daily & Weekly paper to subscribers at the following liberal rates:

TO MY MOTHER.

BY PAUL H. HAYNES.

Like streamlets to a silent sea,

These songs with varied melody

Flow from bright Fancy's upland free,

To Lethe's clouded ocean;

They lapse in deepening music down

The slopes of flower-lit meadows,

Nor dream, poor songs! how near them

From

Oblivion's rayless shadow!

Yet thought of brief and dubious life,

All wed to incompleteness,

The voices of these lays are rife

With faint and fleeting sweetness;

One chord to make more full the strains,

One note to say not smothered,

Is echoed in the heart's refrain

Which holds thy name, my mother!

To thee my earliest verse I brought,

All wreathed in love and roses—

Some glowing lay of fancy's flight

With tender May-mind dross;

Thou didst not taint my fledgling song,

Nor view its flight with scorn;

"The bird," thou saidst "grown fleet and strong!"

Might yet outscar the morning!

Ah! betwixt that hour and this,

Eternities seem flowing;

O'er impassable gulches of youth and bliss

Dark express boughs are growing;

Our Fate hath dimmed with haze all

The rich, pure gold of pleasure,

And changed the choicest chord of joy

To Care's heart-broken measure!

But through it all,—the blight the pall,

The stress of tedious weather,—

Thou God who keeps wild chaos in thrall

Hath linked our lots together;

So hand to hand, we sail the gloom,

Faith's mystic phanix ending

To sound the ways which end in bloom

Of Eden's everlasting!

I bless thee, dear, with reverent thought!

Pale face and tresses hoary;

Whose every sigh, though laid to rest

Some list of heavenly glory—

Thou, with trust assured sublime,

Death's angel-call that waits,—

To thee, as once my earliest rhyme,

Lo! now, I bring—my latest!

For the Republican.

AMATA.

FROM THE GERMAN OF HANS THARAU.

BY A YOUNG LADY OF JACKSONVILLE.

CHAPTER IV.

Frau Wiennemann sat at her writing

table.

The literary lady looked handsome in her simple negligee than in evening to-lette.

She did not appear in a pleasant frame of mind for some suspicious wrinkles lay between the thick brows, and that expression which the Counselor designated as "signs of bad weather" played about the corners of her mouth.

But the lines which flowed from her pen betrayed nothing of this displeasure. She quickly folded the note in a triangle, sealed and addressed it to

"Herr Professor Gregorius."

"If he does not come for that,"

thought the lady, "then I will give him up! His little wife makes him quite inaccessible to his friends!"

She rang for a servant.

"Deliver this immediately."

"Certainly my lady."

But the important note was left in the vestibule a few minutes while the servant put on his best coat and smoothed his hat.

The Counselor made use of this oppor-

Wienemann who in vain seeks to draw back the plumes of his feathers.

The hat struck Herr Gregorius.

As though struck by an arrow, the lady sprang from her seat—she had become purple from inward rage and also from astonishment, for the Counselor seldom dared to deliver such a language.

But before she could find words "Herr Kathen" was announced and Albert entered the room at the same moment.

Ah Herr von Kathen! it is delightful to see your face again, how kindly he greeted the Counselor's proposals in regard to the library affair, giving him the fullest confidence, and every one was surprised to see the relations between the two become so favorable, and many reproached themselves with having mis-judged the Counselor so differently. It was really handsome of the gray-haired man thus to overcome his dislike and mortification and prove himself so friendly towards the Professor's proposals. And Edward also rejoiced thereat and all he could in his open straight forward manner to make the Counselor forget that he had ever opposed his decisions. And he was for that reason now on the best of terms with him. He could not regret his former opposition, but he did his best to be polite. And he experienced no little satisfaction from Albert's changed manner. Generally speaking,

The Senate has indefinitely postponed the House bill to repeal the Ku-Klux law, so far as it relates to Calhoun and several other counties.

Gov. Lindsay has recently sent to the House two veto messages, based on the unconstitutionality of the bills vetoed.

Our generally exact friend of the Montgomery Advertiser gives credit for an article on the prolongation of the session of the Legislature, that belongs to the Talladega "Mountain Home."

"The Jacksonville Democrat" concedes the right, but questions the prudence of expressing views that may differ from other journals of the party. This is a question of policy, where State issues are involved. The tone of the Democrat is so different from the editorial insinuation of some men who conduct journals that raise questions as to its doing, that we regard it as refreshing and hope it may be the harbinger of conciliation to the party. It is such and sensible, in its judgment, that we have no reason to be in any hurry. It is equally as foolish and unpropitious to say that we all agree, when it is known that we do not. The Selma Times does not raise questions as to its doing, and its platform of principles is plainly enunciated, and upon that it intends to rise or fall. We differ with some of our contemporaries upon the local question as we have differed upon other questions of State policy with them, but we do not expect to do so. We forget what is due to them, or to ourselves, as to attempt to raise questions as to the Democratic party or to question the honesty of their motives. We recognize the fact that there can be an honest difference of opinion upon all subjects, and we have never yet questioned the patriotism of men who have differed with us.

In replying to what the Jacksonville said to us, "the Democrat" says that we have been into a commotion, and what we have believed and what we meant exactly; that if his recognition and the endorsement of his administration, that we would not be so ready to be contented in our opposition to the policy of Governor Lindsay has been based upon our views of the best for the general welfare of the State, and not upon personal grounds. We gave notice when the question was raised upon the people, and we obtained the two million straight bonds, that we would be pressing in the effort to fill the State of the so-called obligations. We have done so, and we shall keep it up, and whenever the Democratic party shall say that we ought to pay these bonds, and engrave it in their platform, then the Selma Times cannot endorse it, but will continue the fight against the payment of the bonds, and in the interests of the people, as long as it is in its power, there is the best hope of getting rid of the infamous securities that have been perpetuated upon the people. —Selma Times.

It seems to us that the Times makes issues that do not in reality exist, and thereupon assumes many positions that are not combated by the Alabama press. For instance, we all agree that we will not pay invalid claims against the State; but what constitutes valid or invalid claims is the question that we are just now trying to decide. Nobody is going to "knock that 'pay-no-invalid-claims' chip off the hat of the Times. Again, if we understand the position of affairs, not a single paper in this State has evinced the slightest disposition to press any particular man or measure upon the acceptance of the Times; and we submit the question honestly to it, if it declares on its part not to be "counted in," under certain circumstances, is not calculated to inspire the Radical party with fresh hope, which will lead to a close organization and better chance of success? Is it not "giving aid and comfort to the enemy"? Does the attitude of affairs justify such expressions on the part of Democratic newspapers?

But we have no fears that the Times will fly the track in any contingency that is likely to arise. Its editor is a patriotic gentleman of means and education and is incapable of hesitation as to what course he will pursue when the Times comes. We regard his present action as a mere training, a working off of surplus flesh for the real contest, between the Radical and Democratic parties, in November.

In alluding to an almost identical declaration in a former issue of the Times, the Livingston Journal handsomely declares its entire willingness to acquiesce in the action of the next Democratic Convention, and trusts the Times and kindred papers will do the same. The article is so well tempered and so sensible that we copy it entire, text and all, in the next column.

Our Water Works are undoubtedly no longer a matter of doubt. A dispatch has been received from Judge Walker announcing the gratifying fact that he has closed the trade for the purchase of the necessary piping and material. Gen. Forney has already gone to work and we may look for the enterprise to be pushed through in a very short time. For the benefit of our friends at a distance we will state that the water is to be brought in iron pipes one mile and a half, from an ice cold freestone spring of water that gushes from the rocks of the mountain east of us. When we get this water we will certainly have both an abundance and a variety. We have now, a hundred steps from the public square, a large and swiftly flowing limestone spring—large enough to float a flat-boat or turn the machinery of the largest mill or manufactory. To the east of us, toward the mountain, and only a good before-breakfast walk's distance, we have a most excellent Chalybeate spring. Seven miles west of us are the finest white and blue Sulphur springs in the State. Already numbers of our lower-country friends make Jacksonville their place of summer resort; but if we had the accommodations, hundreds more would come every season. This is why we think a large and first class hotel, fitted up expressly to accommodate summer visitors, would pay handsomely. Any gentleman undertaking such an enterprise would meet the warmest encouragement and co-operation on the part of our citizens.

The Issue is Made—Rings vs. People.

"We do not believe there will be any harmony in the Democratic ranks upon State issues, in the next canvass. One portion of the party hold that in order to maintain the credit of the State, that it is essential that bonds that have been issued, not in accordance with law, but in direct violation of it, should be paid by the State, the other portion are justly entitled to believe that there is but one way to maintain the credit of the State, and that is by refusing to pay either principal or interest on any illegal bond that has been issued, and that all bonds are illegal and not valid claims that have not been issued in strict compliance with the law authorizing them. Such is the condition of the party. One side is represented by Gov. Lindsay, the other by the people. It is really corporations against the people. —Selma Times.

We regret exceedingly to find, in a Democratic journal, the opinion expressed in the first sentence of the above extract from the Times. Such utterances are not only injudicious, but inexhaustible, and we are at a loss to account for them, unless we attribute them to a dogmatism sometimes indulged in by would-be political leaders who affect the championship of "the dear people," and are ever fighting sham battles in their defence.

We do not pretend to deny that through false legislation, and the acts of corrupt officials, "rings" have misled the State, endangered its credit and jeopardized the interests of its people. And, we are obliged to admit that our Governor has not evinced that degree of circumspection and Democratic conservatism, which his friends expected of him. Still, we see no reason for anticipating a disruption of the party, or even serious discord in its ranks, if those entertaining diverse opinions on public policy will eschew the arts of bigotry and demagoguery, and confine themselves to legitimate efforts to control public sentiment. In saying this, no personalities are intended. We mean simply to rebuke a growing tendency to set up and contend for individual opinions and conclusions, without respect for (and too often in contempt of) the opinions of others of undoubted honesty, and having equally good grounds on which to base their conclusions.

The question of the State's liability on account of her endorsements and loans to railroads is one involving many abstract points. It cannot be solved by a dash of the pen. Nor have we any assurance that what might seem the easiest and quickest solution of it would be the most satisfactory one to the people. On the question referred to, there is a diversity of opinion, not only among Democrats of unbounded honesty and patriotism, but among the best legal talent of the State, as well. Under such circumstances, however we may be inclined to our own judgment, we are too modest to claim that all wisdom is centered in us; and too thoroughly Democratic to intimate that unless our views are coincided in by the party, "there will be no harmony in the Democratic ranks upon State issues."

We have too much respect for the ability of the Democrats of the lower house of our Legislature, and too much confidence in their patriotism and integrity, to doubt for one moment that they will aid at once to relieve the State and people from the dilemma they are in, if there were no impediment in the way of their doing so.

The question of the State's liability is, (the Times to the contrary, notwithstanding,) like most others of public policy, a two-sided one, and bearing in mind that the two sides of both sides represent tax payers, we feel fully bound to accord to each an honesty of intent that the Times is unwilling to accord to those not ready to accept its dogmas as an inflexible guide. It is a time-honored custom of the Democratic party to determine questions of policy in Conventions emanating directly from the mass of the party. And it has been customary for minorities and individuals holding adverse views (while claiming membership in that party) to defer to the judgment of the majority. Such a Convention will be held in Alabama, within a few months from this time, and doubtless the party will then decide upon a line of action with reference to the vexed question. Until that time, we care not how assiduously the Times promulgates its views respecting the issue to be presented. On the contrary, we shall honor its conscientious efforts; but, meanwhile, we, as editors of a Democratic journal, protest against its unwarranted assumption that "there will not be any harmony in the Democratic ranks upon State issues."

Such an assumption is productive of evil to the party, and is (we are satisfied) unjust to the Times—since it suggests a suspicion that the wish was father to the thought.

Mule Artillery.

[John Phoenix.]

Out in a certain Western fort, some time ago, the major conceived the idea that artillery might be used effectively in fighting with the Indians by dispensing with gun-carriages and fastening the cannon upon backs of mules. So he explained his views to the commandant. A howitzer was selected and strapped upon an ambulance mule with the muzzle pointed toward the tail. When they had scoured the gun and loaded it with ball-cartridge, they led the mule and steved mule out on the bluff, and set up a target in the middle of the river to practise at. The rear of the mule was turned toward the target, and he was backed gently up to the edge of the bluff. The officers stood around in a semicircle, while the major went up and inserted a time-fuse in the touch-hole of the howitzer. When the fuse was ready, the major lit it and retired. In a minute or two, the hitherto unruffled mule heard the fizzing back there on his neck, and it made him uneasy. He reached his head around to ascertain what was going on, and as he did so, his body turned and the howitzer began to sweep around the horizon. The mule at last became excited, and his curiosity grew more and more intense, and in a second or two he was standing with four legs in a dunch, making six revolutions a minute, and the howitzer understood, threatening sudden death to every man within half a mile. The commandant was observed to climb suddenly up a tree; the lieutenants were seen sliding over the bluff into the river, as if they didn't care at all about the high price of uniforms; the adjutant made good time toward the fort; the sergeant began to throw up breastworks with his bayonet, and the major rolled over the ground and groined. In two or three minutes there was a puff of smoke, a dull thud, and the mule—oh! where was he? A solitary jackass might have been seen turning successive back-somersaults over the bluff, only to rest at last, finally, with his howitzer at the bottom of the river, while the ball went off toward the fort, hit the chimney in the major's quarters, rattled the adobe bricks down into the parlor, and frightened the major's wife into convulsions. They do not allude to it now, and no report of the results of the experiment was ever sent to the war department.

PROCESS TO MAKE VEGETABLE MANURE BY FERMENTATION.

The frequent ranting of farming on small scale amounts almost to a derision with a farmer of no manure and money, and he stands rather non-plussed before repeated facts of achievement of ten or hundred acre gentlemen, who can gratify their every whim and caprice. Don't despair, honest yeoman, you shall do as well and better than they, for I will divulge to you the grand arcane of husbandry. All I ask is your confidence, your docility and muscle, and my word for it you will not regret a first trial.

MODUS OPERANDI.

Mark out an oblong square spot of ground, of a size suitable for the quantity of manure to be made.

This being done, throw the dirt from the inside of the lines—forming an excavation, the bottom of which should be concave or dish-like, and so much inclined towards one end of the parallelogram, when a hoghead or other receptacle is sunk in, that liquids (from the heap) will flow readily into it. The excavation made on level ground should be from six to three inches deep. The dirt thrown out may be used in the compost heap, excepting enough to form a small embankment around the excavation and reservoir so as to prevent water from running in in case of rain.

As a further precaution to guard against damage from this source, a small gutter should be cut outside of this embankment to direct the course of water from the reservoir. The surface of the excavation should be beaten, so as to prevent the loss of the drainings by filtration. This done we proceed to the manufacture of our decomposing agent. Fill the hoghead or reservoir with stagnant or corrupt water, stable flowings, etc., then throw in the following ingredients:

1 bushel of quicklime (unsacked), 1 bushel chimney soot, (this article may be omitted.) 1 bush, unsacked wool ashes, 2 pounds salt, 1 pound saltpetre. 2 bushels plaster of paris. 15 barrels of faeces (night soil). It is to be understood that these proportions are established for one ton of dry materials or two tons of green vegetables, and that if you use more of these materials you ought to augment the quantities progressively and in a certain proportion. I ought to recommend not to depart widely from the quantity of lime fixed above, because lime being corrosive it follows that if you put a quantity made too strong, it will eat up the unctuous particles of the manure. Neither ought you to go beyond the above quantity of soot, because too much of it will stop fermentation. Now for the heap; but before building it we must place a grate over the excavation; its object is to give access to the air under the heap and also to facilitate the flowing of the liquor from it, during the process of fermentation; first lay down four poles lengthwise of the excavation at equal distances from each other, placing them upon blocks so as to prevent them from sinking into the ground. The butt end of these poles should be placed next to the hoghead, vat or reservoir and the inside ones should be laid upon them upon a level. This done, place other poles or rail across the first one foot apart, and your work is complete.

MATERIALS OF WHICH TO MAKE THE COMPOST.

The compost heap may be made from almost any kind of vegetable or mineral substances, such as all kinds of plants, green or dry; weeds, rushes, swamp grass, briars, mullein, leaves and rakings of the woods; corn stalks and stubble, cotton stalks, reeds, cane, potato and peavines, cotton seed; all kinds of straw, saw dust, hedge rows, ditch banks, muck, black earth, loam, common earth, &c.; in fact everything that will retain the lye and serve to form a base or body, may be used to advantage.

MANNER OF MAKING THE HEAP.

The heap should be made as compact as possible and from six to ten feet high. It should be built perpendicularly and the corners be kept as nearly square as may be; to accomplish this, always keep the outside of the heap a little the highest while packing.

Commence by putting upon the grate a portion of the vegetables to be converted into manure, making a layer from one to two feet deep (observing to lay some of the coarser materials first upon the grate). Tramp it down well, so as to make it solid; then put on a light coating of earthy materials, some three or four inches deep, in order to make the heap more solid; and also to absorb the liquor and retain the gases. Then water copiously with the lye, observing to stir the lye well from its depth before applying it. It would be well before the watering is made, to spread a light coating of leaves over the earthy matter, in order to save walking in the mud while applying the lye. Then put on another layer of vegetable materials, and also a small quantity of earthy matter as before, and water again with the lye; and thus continue to do, until you have disposed of all the materials that are on hand. When this heap is finished, cover it with straw or weeds forming a kind of roof to protect it from the rain and sun. If your heap is composed partly of corn-stalks, briars or other hard substances, they should in some way be broken or crushed before putting them into the heap, that the lye may penetrate them more readily. For this purpose they might be first carted to the heap, and left in such a position that while carting the other materials the teams might pass over them. The heap should be watered about three times (once a week) after its construction; and that the lye may reach the bottom of the heap, and be well diffused to every part, you should, before watering, throw off the covering and with an iron bar make holes over the whole surface. In thirty days it will be ready for use. But, if, before removal, you wish to apply a finishing touch, just pour over it one bucket of good guano in solution, and my word for it your pile is worth a royal tressouer. In carting it off cut it down vertically, put it in drill and cover at once.

If curiosity will lead to a first trial of this process, more powerful stimulants will invite you to a second, for perched upon one of these charming mounds, in view of several acres more—heedless of the ascending haze, the richest fumes will tell you of untold treasures of cotton and corn. No wonder if during these delightful reveries the faculty of your oratory becomes perverted. Through culture your palate will get reconciled to larger beer, why should your sense of smell be more obstinate? Unless we wear ourselves from prelections for violets and roses, and cultivate a love for dunghills, we never will be farmers.

ALL

Those indebted to me, or to "E. L. Woodward's Son," are earnestly solicited to make payment by 1st March, or, very soon thereafter. This refers to ALL DEBTS, both old and new. I am in earnest, please delay not. "A hint to the wise is sufficient."
E. L. WOODWARD.
February 8th 1872-4t

We are indebted to our new and very courteous and accommodating Grocery Merchant, Col. L. J. Parr, for a sack of Apples, Onions, Irish Potatoes, &c., for which we return thanks. Such gifts do not come under the head of "small presents," and hence we do not object to receiving them.

Hereafter that couplet concerning a "stomachic fully of rum" will be rendered in Jacksonville, "Ho! Ho! Ho! Water Works come!"

In this number of the Republican we present the advertisement of Mr. D. C. Coleman, the proprietor of the justly celebrated Nashville Marble Works. Mr. Coleman works nothing but the finest of Marble and still competes in prices with those who work an inferior article. If we mistake not he has undertaken the erection of the Confederate Monument on Cemetery Hill in Rome, and he will be the very man for us to secure to erect the Monument here. He will visit Jacksonville in a few days and will bring some designs for our Monument along with him which our people will have an opportunity of seeing.

It will be seen from an Ordinance published elsewhere, that there will be an Election for Mayor and Aldermen of Jacksonville, on the first Saturday in March.

We have taken out several expired advertisements this week, and consequently have more room for news, as our patrons will observe.

We have received the first number of the "Central Alabamian," edited by R. C. BARKER. It will be devoted mainly to Immigration and the Local interests of this rising young city.

(Communicated.)
Mr. Editor:—Allow us, through the columns of your paper, to ask the present Mayor and Board of Councilmen to allow us hereby to nominate them for re-election the first Saturday in March. Under existing circumstances, we think that it would be much better to re-elect the present Mayor and Board, than to have good and efficient officers and we believe that their nomination will meet with the applause of the people.

OBITUARY.
DIED, Sunday morning, CAUSE, infant daughter of Henry and Eliza Forney.

As we gazed on the little infant, lovely even in death; robed in spotless white; the sadness of our hearts was soothed with the thought, that, though we were taking the last look of its pure body, and at once consign that to the earth, its spirit was in Heaven—a happy angel! It was carried gently to its quiet resting place. We paused for a moment, and lifted our hearts to God, silently beseeching him to "comfort those who mourned." As for the babe, we had nothing to ask. The sure word of promise we had said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." As we looked on the infant, we thought of the hopes that were about to be buried there. But why should they be? Why not rise from the earth, and follow the bright track of an immortal soul, perfect in innocence, at the fountain of bliss, where the same soul to rest forever and without change, without pain, and without sin? What are the highest anticipations connected with this world, when compared to an eternity of unalloyed happiness which is to come—happiness which eye hath not seen, nor heard, nor the imagination of man conceived. The last offices of affection have been paid, and the spirit has gone to God who gave it.

OXFORD LOCALS.

Col. Crook, our representative from this county, will please accept the thanks of our citizens for recent favors.

North, Motes & Co., keep constantly on hand a large and well selected stock of Groceries.

Cotton has been in good demand for several days. Prices ranging from 20 to 21 and upwards.

We hear some murmuring about the law recently passed prohibiting the sale of spirituous liquors in our town or within five miles thereof. They argue that they are deprived of their liberties. Away with such liberties that brings so many to beggary and want; that causes so many wives, daughters and sisters to weep and suffer. Away with such liberties, that license a man to deal out a poison to his fellow man to render him unfit to attend to his business, and makes him a nuisance in a community.

We anxiously look forward to the day when the legislature, in its wisdom, will enact a law, if not to prohibit its sale entirely would throw such restrictions around the sale of it as to make the dealer in it responsible for any damage occurring from its use. We see such has been done by some of the Northern States. We say again we hope soon to see such an act passed by our General Assembly. They could not, in our judgment, pass an act that would be of such vital importance to the people at large, than to throw such restrictions around the sale of this poison, that is now being so liberally and indiscriminately dealt out to our people to the detriment of all those who partake of it, and to the annoyance of those who do not.

Don't forget to call on North, Motes & Co. when you come to Oxford.

Dr. Roberts and family arrived in town a few days ago. We welcome the Dr. in our midst.

Good night Lon,

BRICK.

LADICA LOCALS.

Well Lon, if you remember, the water works mule and cart all came up at the same time. The water works question seems to be settled. There has been nothing said about the mule and cart since first out. I would like Matt to inform us up this way if he is still on duty, or has he backed into a ditch and killed himself? If so, we have two or three up this way about the same age and quality. Jim will bring them down at any time called for.

We have a new firm in our town. Mr. J. B. Graham, an old merchant of this place, and D. B. Wilson have associated themselves in the mercantile business; but then you will not allow me to say anything in reference to their business, unless they advertise. I think they certainly will. Ed still wears a pleasant smile—they surely will advertise. It is known as the Greenback firm—they are able to advertise. It will give Rock more elbow room. They must advertise. They can sell more Goods by advertising.

Jeff claims to be one among the best Tailors in the United States for a young man.

Mr. A. O. Stewart has moved into our town—a lucky place for good citizens and Greenbacks.

Well, neighbor Skyly, I did think I would give the old ox a little straw; but when I read of so many oxen in one night, I knew there was Greenbacks in that straw for me. Now Moses just let the music keep dropping.

It was a mistake Dick, it was not Rock that was thrown into the calaboose. I still remain near the sea creek.

ANOTHER LIVE TOWN.—Our mountain neighbor, Jacksonville, has a live set of men who are doing a great deal to beautify their delightful town. The latest improvement is the building of water-works.—Montgomery Advertiser.

"It is time to stop this cant about a division of the party," says the Montgomery Advertiser, at the close of a column article on the subject.

The Methodist printing house in Nashville was burned February 14th. Loss $30,000.

A Chicago telegram of Feb. 17th says 10 persons were frozen to death in Dixon county, Nebraska. Seven woodcutters at the Winnebago agency were frozen. The suddenness and severity of the storm were unparalleled.

TRICE, the railroad conductor, who slandered ex-President Davis, and who lately attempted to assassinate Gen. Maury, has been discharged from his position on the Memphis and Charleston Railroad.

The majority and minority k-k-lux reports from the sub-committee of Congress are nearly ready. They agree that nearly all the Southern States are approaching financial ruin from bad legislation and the k-k-lux. One report attributes the bad legislation to the k-k-lux, the other attributes the k-k-lux to bad legislation.

A negro man near Clanton Station on the S & N. R. R. held a sheep on the track in front of an advancing train with a view to the decapitation of the innocent victim. Something that was wool was buried next day; but it wasn't the sheep. The sheep escaped with a broken leg.

Mrs. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.—It relieves the little sufferer from pain, cures Wind, Colic, Regulates the Stomach and Bowels, Corrects Acidity, and during the process of teething it is invaluable. Perfectly safe in all cases, as millions of mothers can testify.

Some substances have the power of influencing the changes which go forward in the human tissues, without themselves taking any integral part in those changes. Salt, for instance, hastens transformation and waste, and consequently creates the necessity for a more liberal diet; while, on the other hand, alcohol retards change and waste.

On this principle, Dr. Fisch, in his Bitters has furnished a preparation having among other properties that of preserving both the materials and the forces of the system, and in this, as in other things, "A penny saved is a penny gained." But it is not only in this negative way that Dr. Fisch's remedy works for the building up of the physical man. While it holds back the wasting processes it spurs forward the preparing processes. It promotes the flow of the alimentative juices in the mouth, the stomach, and the liver; and thus enables the system to utilize more food—to make more blood. The scriptural assertion that "The blood thereof is the life thereof," is the expression of a physiological fact; and the amount of food which man can eat with relish and digest, affords the exact measure and index of the man's strength. And when once Dr. Fisch's remedy has given the start to an improvement in this direction, the untamed energies of nature take up the work and carry it forward; and thus under the amelioration permanent.

A Living Furnace.

The living body is a regulated furnace. The human organism is all more or less combustible, but not equally so. The blood, that is to say the food in its transformed state, may be compared to the fuel, and the more stable tissues formed from the blood, to the iron stove; and the whole contains the fuel. Just in proportion to the energy and activity with which life is carried on, does this combustion proceed; and just in proportion as the combustion proceeds, is fresh fuel, that is to say fresh blood, required. But in order to obtain a steady and continuous fire, fuel must be present and not only fuel, but the power of converting the fuel into blood, that is, digestive energy. Where there is a failure in this digestive energy, or in the appetite which accompanies it, stimulants of various descriptions are frequently had recourse to; but these are enabled to take, is only digested, and too long and too exclusively, they tend to derange the digestive functions and to take away the natural desire for food, which is the only true life supporter. But let Dr. Fisch's Bitters be used perseveringly and in the prescribed quantities, in conjunction with the daily meals, and their tonic qualities will rapidly strengthen the digestive organs and create at the same time a sufficient and healthy appetite. And when an abundance of wholesome food, (which we are now enabled to take,) is duly digested and assimilated, it will give a fullness of vitality which will take away any desire for the improper use of alcoholic stimulants.
